Description

Picture waking up to ocean views that stretch forever, your morning coffee in hand as the Dominican sun paints the horizon gold. That's just Tuesday at Villa Danila.

This seven-bedroom retreat in Casa de Campo's Costa Mar doesn't just sit on the landscape, it belongs to it. Stone walkways float over reflecting pools, leading you through tropical gardens to a pool that seems to spill into the Caribbean Sea. The architecture speaks the local language: soaring wooden ceilings that breathe with the breeze, walls of glass that erase the line between inside and out.

Each bedroom tells its own story through rich wood headboards and private terraces. The master suite? It's basically a small hotel suite with ocean views that make you forget your phone exists. Two bedrooms sleep four each, perfect when you're traveling with the whole crew.

Your days flow between the infinity pool, the private cinema where leather recliners wait for movie nights, and the outdoor dining pavilion where your personal chef serves fresh ceviche as the sun sets. Speaking of staff, they handle everything from breakfast to evening cocktails, appearing when needed, invisible when not.

Two golf carts mean spontaneous trips to Minitas Beach or the marina. The gym keeps routines intact. The jacuzzi handles the rest.

Daily rates start at $8,000 during low season, climbing to $19,500 during holidays. Worth every peso when paradise has your name on it.
